THE MARTLE OF CHARITY.

From Mr. ELBRIDGE T. GERRY'S frautic opposition to THE EVENING WORLD Children's Bill it is apparent that he is a believer in the acriptural saying that 'charity covereth a multitude of sins," and that, in fact, in his particular line of charity he is more strenuous in the defense of the sins which it covers than in upholding the charity.

Does he think that charity and wrong-doing the covers with this dauces, baton manipulations and songs.

Does he think that charity and wrong-doing need of necessity be inseparable?

The aim of the Children's Bill is to enhance the charitable features of juvenile reformatory institutions by eradicating therefrom the erying avil of needlessly k dnapping the children of the worthy poor.

THE EVENING WORLD believes that wrong is none the less wrong because committed by Mr. Graux. It would strip the mantle of charity from off such outrages as were perpetrated upon TINA WEISS, JOSIE SHEPHARD, and nobody knows how many more, and render their repetition impossible.

AN ALDERMANIO OPPORTUNITY.

Gentlemen of the Board of Aldermen, a word with you !

At this time, when our city is wild with enthusiasm over the return of the gallant knight of the diamond from their trip s ound the world, and the deep hold the National game has upon our population is being so unmistakably manifested, the "fly in our cintment" is the uncertain fate of the Polo Grounds.

A rare opportunity is afforded you to place yourselves in harmony with the ruling sentiment of the hour by announcing a decision favorable to the preservation of the Polo Grounds for this season.

By so doing you will please almost everybudy, displease almost no one, do no ininstice to the city, and add greatly to the p'easures of the festivities arranged in honor of the giants of the bull field.

It would be an Aldermanic hit that would evoke prolonged cheers of approval all along

Yes, "struck in Goodfriend, 'the play in cricket is a battle between the bowler and the batter, and the whole play is for runs. They have no science in fielding, and their fielders open their hands like a lemon-aqueezer to catch the ball. The Englishmen complain that there is no batting, while they praise the fielding, and the tour demonstrates that the efforts towards making the game more of a batting game are in the right direction. The unprofessional spectator, the spectators who never play themselves, are more interested in a batting game. It furnishes them more excitement.

THE TRIP HOME.

The Adriatic, of the White Star line, left Liverpool March 28, and the boys hoped to reach their native land by yesterday morning.

"I tell you," said one of them in a gasp, "the trip out was as easy as lying compared to the return across the Atlantic. We were warned against the heat which we would experience in the Indian Ocean, but we enloyed about the English Channel, but we shant mind her chops at all.

about the English Channel, but we don't mind her chops at all.

"But going home! oh how slow that steamer was! We asked the Captain. He told us we had travelled 352 miles the first day out and every man sat down and figured on't that that speed would not bring us home till Saturday.

"Next day We travelled 351 miles, and the boys figured again.

"We might get in by Friday night!

"We were more cheerful and amused ourselves. The third day we got 340 miles nesser to old Columbia's shores, and we were happy.

"But the fourth day out there was storm and heavy seas and our spirits went down. Only 318 miles and only 331 miles next day!

EVERYBODY SICE OF IT.

"Then to cap the climax, we got a strong head wind till midnight on the sixth day and the log registered only 270 miles. Everybody was sick of it. We wanted to get home!

"Then on Thursday we covered 353 miles, and 241 miles on Friday brought us in sight of land.

and 241 miles on Friday brought us in sight of land.

"Some of the boys cried, and everybody wanted to. Tears of gladness, though, I tell you, for there is no place like home.

"We are here, and I don't want to circumnavigate the globe again as long as I live, though the trip has done us all good. Nobody but Daiy has been sick or disabled.

"Daiy got a wrenched arm and has been unable to eatch for the Chicagos, which weakened them and may in part account for their defeats by the All-Americas, for Anson's throwing has been bad all through the series."

Mrs. Spalding, the venerable mother of the promoter and manager of the tour round the world, has been with her son the entire trip.

AN ADMIRABLE WOMAN. "She is a magnificent woman." said one of the tourists. "She is tall and stately, has white hair and is a gentlewoman to everybody."

The wife of Managar Spalding and their twelve-year, old son, Keith Spalding, joined the tourists at Rome.

SPALDING WANTS A PIECE OF PIE.

A. G. Spalding was coming out of the break-fast-room when The Eventso World reporter captured him. He looked bronzed and as hardy as a nut.

"I feel a good deal better than I did an hour ago," he said in his big voice. "I've had some buckwheat cakes and I feel that I am back in the United States. I hope to get a piece of pie be-fore the day is over. I hadn't the herve to ask for it at breakfast.

A GREAT THING FOR THE GAME. "What effect will the trip have on the game?"
"What effect will the trip have on the game?"
"Why, I think it the stepping-stone to its becoming the universal game. They all took a lively interest in it. One thing that made us Americans hang our heads a little bit, and it was the only one, was to see that in all the towns in England and Australia the clubs have splendid grounds that the city has laid out and set apart for them." set apart for them.

set apart for them."

The best grounds were those at Melbourne, Australia. They were elegant. There we had a splendid game in the Villa Borghese.

There is a sort of elongated basin there, with terraced hills about it and stone steps. I asked Prince Borghese what it was made for, and he said it had been there too long to know the original purpose.

TIMED POLICE.

"We had permission to play in the Coliseum from the Minister of the Interior, but the Chief of Police would not allow it for fear of accident. They haven't had a show there for 500 years. But the old walls are crumbly, the stones loose and we would have had to board over a part of it. Bo we didn't care.

"Financially? Well, we came out all right, though there isn't much of a margin on the side of the treasury. Ward gave ratisfaction as captain. The All-Americas got the best of the games because they play better ball than the Chicagos. I suppose."

The prospect of encountering the chilling fogs of the lower bay, which creep up through the of the lower bay, which creep up through the Narrows in the dusk of early morning, did not have the slightest effect in dampening the ardor of the enthusiastic 400, who went out yestorday in search of the White Star liner Adriatic and the noble band of American baseball tourists, whom she was bringing back home after their long travels around the globe.

When the Laura M. Starin was made fast at the Barge Office does last sight and her passengers went ashore, they all made a solemn vow to be on hand at 5 o'clock sharp this morning, and not one was missing when the appointed hour arrived.

Some of them had not gone to bed at all, and others who had contrived to snatch a few hours sleep had given strict orders to be routed out at 4 o clock A. The occasion was one of those things that only happens once or twice in a lifetime, and none of the boys could afford to lose the opportunity for such a ce ebration.

The others straggled up singly and in groups, notil finally the cutire Reception Committee of One Hundred, with a few additional friends, were all there, and a merry gathering it was.

There were Manager A. M. Palmer, elegantly stirred, with a fresh stration in his button-hole; Col. John A. McCaull, who never missed a racket of this kind; Walton Storm, the pride and beauty of the Roard of Aldermen; Magrane Cox, the artistic vocalist of the United States District. Attorner's effice; handsome Jim Mutrie, who looked as if he would like to stake everybody shand at once; John Montgomery Ward and his wife, Nick Engel, Eugene M. O'Commor, Amos J. Cummings, Gen. H. W. Sleoum, Mayor Orestes Cleveland, of Jersey City Otto Buhl, C. B. Valva, President John K. Day, C. J. Leach, C. H. Byrne, Walter Watrons and a heat of other well-known admirers of the instinual game, especially as exemplified by the laying of the Lamous Gotthem Giants, although there was a big contingent who confessed to a decided weakness for the methods of Baby Anson and his Chileace infants.

When the crowd got on board the Starin they expected the start right off, but there was some delay in order to pick up stragglers who kept cerming up, and then, boo, it was known that their was plenty of time for the Adriatic would not leave Quarantine where she was lying until after sunrise,

As it cause alongside there was a big commotion in both vessels and away up in the bow of the tugboat were seen the two comedians. Hopper and Bell, weying their hats frantically and making all the noise that they could with their lungs, although what they said could not be heard above the dir.

GROUGE GORE ON DECK. George Gore, who was on the poop deck of the Starin, discovered that there was a band on the tug and he velled to Flord to send it aboard the Starin, as it was just what they wanted.

"This is a Boston boat, chartered by Boston people, and we've not our own band and mean to keep it," yelled back Floyd, and then it was observed that a huge paper statue propped up against the pilot-house of the tugboat was labelled in large, conspictions letters: "The Boston School Committeeman."
The party on board the tug included F. L. Lane, George Canfield, Al Johnson, M. W. Kelly, John H. Russell, Jeffrey Hawley and Martin Meyer.

At the carnest cutreaties of DeWolf Hopper and Digby Bell, the captain of the tugboat backed up to the Biarin and these two brothers jumped on board the Reception Committee's boat, when they were overwhelmed by the welcome given them by their enthusiastic friends. A STATUE OF PAPER.

THEEW HIS HAT OVERBOARD. Gus Heckler got so excited that he threw his new Spring sitk Dunlap overboard from the poop deck, and would have had to go hatless the entire voyage had it not been for the presence of mind of DeWolf Hopper, who shied the article out of the soup with his long, crooked-handle cane and restored it to its owner.

AWAY THEY GO. The sun was just beginning to show itself over the house-tops on Brooklyn Heights when the Starin with its jolly party cast off its moorings from the dock and started in the direction of Statea Island. The tug got away first, and after another season of tootings from the steam whistles, both boats not under way.

Just before quarantine was reached the Boston ing was shead and was the first alongside the Adriatic to give the returning tourists a welcome.

"Father said, "There'll be no gas in the Protectory to-night, and the children will be frightened to death."

"We then returned home and nothing was done for two weeks, when father asked me if there was any korosene oil in the home.

"We could not find any, but procured a hottle of benzine, with which father saturated a lot of rags.

He retorted angrily, telling her to mind her own business, and that it would be a pleasure to him to see every one barraed up.!

Inspector Byrnes had trouble in finding the father, but supposed he would visit the court to impress silence upon his son.

He was right, for when young Cassidy was brought to the Essex Market Court this morning the father was observed to sneak in and occupy a sectuded corner.

He was promptly arrested on the charge of arson and gave his name as Henry J. Cassidy, age forty-five years, and his birthplace as Albany.

He was taken to Police Headquarters and will be arraigned at the Essex Market Court this afternoon, when he will be turned over to the White Plains authorities.

From letters found in his pocket it was ascertained that he contemplated leaving the city to-day for some Western town.

At an early hour this afternoon, Henry Cassidy, Rube Lewis William Avery, Ed Sawyer, John Hill and Edward Duer, who are implicated in the plot, arrived at White Plains in custody of New York detectives and were turned over to the Westchester authorities for trial.

MEN'S EXPENSES. They Have Just Found Out that It Is a Dutch Treat and Are Revolting-Delegates of the Mechanics and Trades-men's Society Complain that They Have Been Ignored by the Committee. The Centennial Committee can't understand why it is that the State of Pennsylvania will not pay the expenses of her 3,000 National Guardsmen, who will be quartered here for three days during the celebration. They had not counted on such a drain on the treasury and say that it is only with the most profound misgivings that they have decided to adopt such an unpopular measure as to raise the price of seats on the grand stands to meet the extraordinary expense. It turns out now that when they invited the militia of the different States to take part in the colebration, they said nothing about its being a Dutch trest, and the possibility that the other States may follow the lead of Pennsylvania has begun to make cold chills rut up and down the reveral vertebral columns of the Executive Committeemen.

The latest case before the Grievance Committee is that of the General Society of Mechanics and Tradesmen, who complain that although Mayor Hewitt appointed five of its members on the General Committee of Four Hundred, not one of them ever got on a sub-committee, and all communications sent to the managers of celebrations, reputing a place in the procession, seats at the banguet and the like have been ultrily ignored. Letters addressed to Mr. Gerrs on those points were unan-wered, and now the Society feels very sore about the treatment that it has received.

One of the Executive Committeemen said this militia of the different States to take part in tinued to live with him up to Oct. 1, 1887,

It is expected that the official programme of the celebration will be issued on Monday. The Committee are hard at work out it oday.

There are thirty-five different kinds of badges to be issued by the Committee. The most gorgeons one of all, with a gold bar, will be worn by Mr. Ward McAllister. Others who will wear gold bar badges are Mr. Stuyvesaut Fish, Mr. Hamilton Fish, Mr. E. T. Gerry, Mr. Charence W. Bowen, President Harrison, Vice-President Morton, the Governors of States and Mayor Grant.
